

RETAIL FOCUS

Own brand goods continue to show sales decline PAGE 4

TALKING SHOP

Siobhan McAleer on how she built The Mortgage Shop PAGE 7

Business

SundayTribune 28.09.08

Editor: Emmet Oliver Email: business@tribune.ie

RING TONE

Google's first foray into the mobile phone mobile is a brave and brilliant move PAGE 4

Financial Freedom With Network Marketing

Randy Gage's Book Reveals What it Really Takes to Succeed in Network Marketing

Network or Multi-Level Marketing has certainly generated a lot of controversy over the years. Some feel it is the purview of con artists and money games. Others see it as the last bastion left in the free enterprise system where ordinary people can still create extraordinary wealth. American Randy Gage has made it his mission to be a proponent for the latter explanation. He speaks out strongly against the money games and chain letters, and is an ambassador for legitimate network marketing.

Randy speaks from real-world experience, having gone from a minimum wage dishwasher to multi-millionaire, through the power of network marketing. Now he travels the world teaching seminars, consulting and training others how to achieve his results. His book, How to Build a Multi-Level Money Machine is a no-hype look into the science behind the business. According to Gage, Network Marketing (sometimes called Multi-Level Marketing or MLM for short) can be learned by anyone. But he doesn't recommend you quit your job or business and jump in all the way. He suggests you begin by working part-time.

"Network Marketing is a chance to fire your boss, and build your dream lifestyle," Gage says. "But no one should just relinquish their job to start. You should keep your current employment, and work the business 10-15 hours a week. It really is best to think of it as a two-to four-year plan to replace your current income and create financial freedom. But like any profession, there are skills to develop, knowledge to gain, and work to be done.

“ Network Marketing is a chance to fire your boss, and build your dream lifestyle

“For most people coming into the business, they have never been their own boss before. They are used to having someone looking over their shoulder, telling them what to do. Working for yourself takes a different mindset, training, and discipline.”

Network Marketing can be a very attractive career alternative. Some of the benefits include choosing the hours you work, picking the people you work with, working from home, travel opportunities, and tax benefits. You have an unlimited income potential, and become successful by helping other people reach success. While it's not for everybody, Gage believes network marketing could help many people. He says, "If you like the security of a weekly paycheck, Network Marketing may not be for you. But if you want to break out and create wealth - and you are teachable, not afraid of work, and willing to follow a system - Network Marketing can be an amazing business." For more information on Randy, you can go to www.RandyGage.com

